Lawn Party.

An enjoyable event of Friday, July 15, was the lawn party given by the Fidelis class of the Inman Park Baptist Sunday school, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hatcher, on Highland avenue. The lawn and porches, where the geusts were entertained, were beautifully decorated with flowers and Japanese lanterns.

Mr. and Mrs. Hatcher were assisted in entertaining by Mrs. W. T. Rhodes and Mrs. Claude Daley, president of the class.

An interesting feature of the evening was the return of the proceeds received through the little aprons the members of the class have been sending to their friends, and a very large sum was realized. Mrs. P. V. Ray, Mrs. Claude Daley, Mrs. C. J. Eberhart and Mrs. J. P. Wall being rewarded for having turned in the largest amounts.

PRAISE HIGHWAY DEPARTM'NT WORK

Praise for the accomplishments of the state highway department of Georgia during the two years of its existence voiced by Thomas H. McDonald, of Washington, D. C., chief of the bureau of public roads, and pledges of support for the department in spite of possible minor disagreements over its policies made by Herbert Clay, president of the senate, and other legislative leaders, were two outstanding features of the seventh annual dinner given by the Georgia State Automobile association to the members of the general assembly in the Kimball house Wednesday night.

W. Tom Winn, president of the automobile association, presided, and after outlining the purposes of the organization as being purely devoted to the cause of good roads in Georgia, introduced the speakers, who talked on different phases of the work of improving the highway systems of the state.

Mr. McDonald, of the federal bureau of public roads, delivered the principal address of the evening. He complimented Georgia on attaining the rank of fourth of all states in the union in the amount of federal money used on public road development. He said this was remarkable because the government does not give aid except to states that have highway boards and that the Georgia highway board had been organized but two years.

Dr. C. M. Strahan, chairman of the highway board, was the first speaker and he spoke in behalf of the work of that body. He said his department welcomed the investigation to be made by the legislature of its work. Dr. Strahan declared that he was willing to admit his department had made some mistakes.

"I shall be frank with the investigating committee and tell the members the mistakes we have made just the same as I shall tell it of the good work we have done. I know the record of the department is not a perfect one but it is a creditable one," he said.

Dr. Strahan reviewed in detail the work of the department, declaring it had been able to win the confidence of the federal government and the co-operation of the boards of county commissioners in 105 Georgia counties. He outlined the present program of the department calling for the expenditure of about $20,000,000. He said the board after that will favor the use of the money collected in automobile licenses for maintenance and road patrol.

President Winn then introduced Mr. McDonald who spoke at length of the work of the federal government in Georgia. He explained in detail the method used by the government in extending federal aid declaring that the government comes as a partner in the work of putting business principles into the work of road building.

Mr. McDaniel said the government has spent a total of $78,000,000 in federal aid and that about $4,000,000 of this money has been spent in Georgia, the present program to cost the government, when completed, a total of $7,500,000.

"Georgia now ranks fourth in all the states of the union in the amount of money being spent by the government in road building projects, he said. "The only states ahead of Georgia are Illinois, Pennsylvania and Minnesota."

Mr. McDonald outlined the proposed legislation in congress and said there are certain to be three provisions in the new policy no matter what bills are adopted. One of these is that the state must decide on a restricted system of highways. The second that the state must put up its share of the money. The third that the state must maintain the roads. Mr. McDonald said in certain kinds of road work construction costs are less in Georgia than in any state in the union. He told the members of the legislature that in shaping highway legislation it will be necessary for them to adhere to a system of roads not much larger than the present proposed system of 4,000 miles known as the county seat to county seat plan.

President Herbert Clay, of the state senate, declared that although Georgians are prone to criticize they are fundamentally fair and even if they don't agree on such a big thing as the highway department they are willing to act squarely with it.

"I believe we will all get together on this highway proposition and stick together," he said. "By all means, let's have this legislative investigation and show the people of Georgia how much good the highway department has done. Then we will all stand by it and build it up."

Paul S. Etheridge, of the Fulton county commission, told what the Georgia Association of County Commissioners has done in helping good roads legislation. He read a resolution adopted by the association at its Dublin meeting strongly commending the highway department, the members of the department and the policy it had adopted. He spoke of the Fulton county commissioners' indorsement of the department and its work, although it will be many years before Atlanta and Fulton county will get a dollar of state aid money.

"Fulton county pays into the state treasury about $350,000 a year of this money in automobile licenses, yet not one dollar has been spent or will be spent in the county. We believe that by putting this money into the development of good roads in all parts of Georgia that it will improve Georgia and what builds up Georgia can't help but aid Fulton county and Atlanta," he declared.

Morton Turner, of Brooks county, chairman of the house committee on public roads; Senator R. C. Ellis, chairman of the senate highways committee; Zach Arnold and George Carswell, two of the leaders in the house, and President Winn, made short talks. Fred Houser led a song program.

President Winn read a telegram from W. J. Vereen, of Moultrie, who was on the program in which Mr. Vereen expressed regret that he was unable to attend. He read a letter from A. J. Lippitt, of Albany, president of the Georgia Association of County Commissioners, in which he expressed regret that because of unforseen conditions he could not be present. Mr. Lippitt highly indorsed the work of the highway department and commended Chairman Strong, Engineer Neel and the other members. Governor Thomas W. Hardwick also sent a letter of regret over his inability to attend which was read.

EXISTING METHODS FOR COTTON LOANS

Washington, July 20.—Existing credit machinery of the government will be used for the present in the making of cotton loans, treasury officials said today, without the creation of supplementary cotton loan funds by private organizations.

In announcing last night that further credit will be extended for the harvesting and marketing of the coming cotton crop in whatever amount is legitimately required, the federal reserve system authorities said credit would be extended either directly through member banks or indirectly through non-member banks.

At a conference of governors of the five federal reserve banks in the cotton growing sections of the country yesterday with the federal reserve board, Governor Strong, of the New York bank, and representatives of New York member banks, told the board that the establishment of a cotton loan fund by commercial banks throughout the country was considered at this time to be unnecessary and inadvisable. The New York bankers declared, however, that if the facilities of the federal reserve system and the war finance corporation should prove inadequate they would co-operate in the formation of a cotton loan fund to whatever amount was thought necessary.

The policy of the federal reserve system on cotton loans during the approaching marketing season was decided at the conference and a statement issued which gave assurance of ample credit for the orderly marketing of the crop.

The War Finance corporation has under consideration proposals for cotton exports involving about five hundred thousand bales and twenty million dollars, Director Eugene Meyer announced today.

The export financing, he said, contemplates shipment of two hundred thousand bales from Oklahoma and 300,000 bales from Texas.

With the four hundred thousand bales and about ten million dollars worth of cotton business already done by the corporation Mr. Meyer said, the completed and proposed operations of the corporation at present amounted to nine hundred thousand bales and thirty million dollars.

Mr. Meyer in a statement endorsed the action of the federal reserve board, in ruling that loans may be made indirectly to non-member banks on the ground that this procedure would afford great relief in the south.

"This relief to the small non-member banks in the agricultural districts," Mr. Meyer said, "and the assurance conveyed by Governor Strong, of the federal reserve bank of New York, that in case of need a cotton loan fund to whatever amount the situation may demand, will be provided through banking channels together with what the war finance corporation already has done and the business now in process of negotiation, makes it clear, in my opinion, that adequate financing for the carry-over of the old crop and for the orderly marketing for the new crop may be counted on."

Thomas J. Caldwell, vice president of the federal international banking company of New Orleans, discussed with Mr. Meyer today a proposition for financing the export of 25,000 bales of cotton.

Mr. Caldwell said that his company was preparing to take up with the corporation plans for financing the exportation of large amounts of cotton from all parts of the south.

Election of Judges Of Municipal Court By People Is Urged

Representative Bentley Will Introduce Bill in House This Week.

Taking the position that practically all the judges of Georgia are elected by the people or appointed by the governor, Representative Ernest Bentley, of Fulton, announced Wednesday night that he will introduce in the house this week a measure designed to end the system of appointments of municipal court jurists of Atlanta by the superior court judges and place their selection in the hands of the voters.

At present there are five municipal court judges in Atlanta, and the representative's bill will provide that at the expiration of their present terms the offices shall be filled by election. Since the creation of the municipal judgeships, the superior court jurists have made the appointments.

"In my race last fall, one of the planks in my platform," said Mr. Bentley in discussing his bill, "was to remove these appointments from the hands of the superior court judges. I contended then as now that these appointments may be used to create a political machine.

"I shall push my measure, and already I have pledges of support for its passage. This present method of selecting judges of the municipal courts should be changed, and I am sure the assembly will not make a separate case of Atlanta and allow the superior court judges to continue their appointments," he said.

YAARAB SHRINERS HAVE A BIG TIME

By the Official Disseminator of Sacred Bull.

If old Jupiter Pluvius, who ladles out the rain upon the just and the unjust, ever makes application to join Yaarab temple there will not be a black ball in the ballot box against him, and then when it comes to his initiation, by decree of Illustrious Potentate Heinz and consent of the regular degree team, he will be turned over to the tender mercies of Len Baldwin and the members of the Marietta Shrine club—and may the Lord have mercy upon him, for it's a case of thumbs down for Old Jupe!

Which is prefatory to saying that the aforesaid god of the rain pots did his best to spoil the big day planned Wednesday by the Marietta Shrine club in entertainment of Potentate Heinz, his divan, the officials, degree team and uniformed organizations of Yaarab temple and their ladies, but made a dismal failure in his efforts.

The city was gaily decorated in honor of the guests, and a big crowd of what the Shriners call unregenerates were parked in and about the square to listen to the concert of the band, chanters and Oriental band, and witness the patrol drill. The rain did stop that part of the entertainment, and the guests and organizations were entertained in the big Masonic temple until the rain ceased; but Noble Fred Woodall and the degree team were busy all during the rain pulling stunts that kept the big crowd amused.

Parade is Formed.

At 5:30 o'clock, the rain having ceased, a parade was formed with the band, chanters, patrol, Oriental band, members of the Marietta Shrine club and a long string of automobiles in line. The parade circled the square and then headed for the Marietta Golf club, where supper was served to upward of 400 Shriners and their ladies.

When the crowd was reassembled on the lawn in front of the clubhouse the Million Dollar band played a magnificent concert, after which President Baldwin called for Potentate Heinz, Recorder Argard and the disseminator of sacred bull to come to the platform, and they succeeded in doing so, each one being escorted by two beautiful ladies. It had been announced that there would be no speech-making, but Len couldn't pull what he had in store without a few remarks; but as quickly and in as few words as possible be introduced. Potentate Henry C. Heinz and presented him with a magnificent fez, one of the handsomest and costliest ever worn by a potentate. Potentate Heinz responded with a brief but eloquent speech, in which he eulogized the Shrine spirit of Yaarab and paid a beautiful and flowery compliment to the Marietta Shrine club for its splendid entertainment and its hearty support of the parent organization.

"Some Bull" Is Right.

In the name and in behalf of the Marietta Shrine club Potentate Heinz then presented to the official disseminator of sacred bull a toy bull as an emblem of his office, and this personage pocketed his modesty for a moment and blushingly stammered his thanks.

Recorder Argard having gotten the "goat" of the Marietta Shrine club on several occasions, the members got even with him when Potentate Heinz presented him with a real live nanny on behalf of the club.

The chanters entertained with a number of beautiful selections, following which the Oriental band got into action, and Mirzala, the beautiful Oriental dancer, performed under the spotlight to the admiration of the assembled crowd.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to dancing in the beautiful clubhouse, and the caravan headed back to Atlanta at 11 p. m., after an afternoon and evening that was replete with enjoyment, with the satisfaction of knowing that the Marietta Shrine club will not let a little thing like rain interfere with a perfect day.

PLANS ARE DISCUSSED TO RAISE SCHOOL FUNDS

Decatur, Ga., July 20.—(Special.) Plans for raising funds to meet a deficit of $12,000 in order that the equipment of the Decatur high school might be completed were discussed Wednesday night at a meeting of a committee of 100 Decatur citizens in a meeting at the McDonough street school. G. W. Clausier, superintendent of the Decatur schools, said that if the deficit were not met by popular subscription, tuition of about $40 a pupil would be necessary.

It was explained by Superintendent Clausier that after handling such expenses as salaries, grading and upkeep, the board has only $1,000 left. The equipment of the new school will cost $13,000, he said. The meeting was presided over by Charles D. McKinney.
